Lion Rock Park mosquito-free

"Before they shut down the park, I came here every day. I'm glad they opened it again."

"If the government thinks it's safe, then I won't worry. I think they did a great job killing the mosquitoes."

"I came here because the park opened again. I didn't bring repellent because I'm not afraid of dengue fever."

RECENTLY, there was an outbreak of dengue fever in Wong Tai Sin (黃大仙). So the government closed down the nearby Lion Rock Park, which they think was the source of the disease. After two months of pest control, the park is open to the public again, with mosquito repellent available at the information desk. Here is what some of the park visitors think.

So is the park safe to visit or not?

I think it is safe, but I will bring anti-mosquito patches just in case.
